Caila Quinn told Us Weekly exclusively at the Women Tell All taping last month in Hollywood that she couldn't picture herself as the next Bachelorette.

"It's definitely something I would think about," Quinn, 24, told Us on February 27. "I did fall in love with this process before ... but I definitely need some time." At the taping, Quinn said outright that her personality didn't exactly fit the bill.

"I just don't think that I'm that kind of person," she told Us. "I'm just a normal person. That's why."

Within one week of the interview, Bachelor Ben Higgins' second runner-up may have decided to go for it. As previously reported by Us, the software sales rep was followed around by cameras in her hometown of Hudson, Ohio, on Friday. An observer told Us that the likely next lead of ABC's beloved franchise was "filming her Bachelorette intro package."

ABC has yet to confirm who will be the next Bachelorette.

Prior to the decision, Quinn weighed the pros and cons of returning to the franchise. "I feel like it would mean a lot to have guys who actually are interested in you come to the table and have intentions of marriage at the end," she told Us last month. "Because a lot of people date right now not knowing whether that person that they're with really wants to marry them, and so this is a clear kind of situation."
